

Securely chat with your businesses

Qwil Messenger is a single chat app that solves the challenge of making chat safe and compliant when it matters most: between staff, clients and partners.

Communicate in a way that suits your needs

- Efficiently chat with your company representatives as you do with your family and friends, but via a highly secure platform designed to protect you and your data at all times.
- Easily share documents and content knowing that only the intended recipients have received and read the information. Remove the need to password protect sensitive files each time you share them.
- Remove the friction associated with existing business communication channels by no longer having to verify your identity each time you speak to someone and the need to password protect sensitive files.
- Let your company representatives invite their colleagues to conversations to provide their input as and when required.

One app for everyone

Qwil Messenger has been designed to work seamlessly on both mobile and web with all your companies in one app. Easily access each company via the side menu, and chat with your relevant contacts at the organisation. Your chats are synchronised across all your devices, and can be accessed on as many devices as you authorise.

Intuitive

Looks and feels like chat. Invite, share, track and be notified in a familiar way.

Coordinated

Chat with the right participants, at the right time.

Confidential

Chat information used only for intended business purposes and no other.

Verified

Know that users and businesses are who they say they are.

Secure

Your data is protected and remains private at all times.

Compliant

Unlike social chat, your phone data is neither harvested nor shared.

"Qwil Messenger is like WhatsApp for financial and professional services. It is a product which we believe has significant potential to improve the engagement with clients, partners and businesses."

- Graham Kellen, Chief Digital Officer

Why are businesses using Qwil Messenger?

Unfortunately, social chat platforms do not meet the security or privacy standards required by most businesses and government regulators. This is particularly relevant where the communication involves sensitive financial or personal information that must remain confidential, or where financial crime and fraud risks are ever present.

Qwil Messenger is different. It has been solely designed to meet the required standards and to give businesses a common platform on which to bring conversational commerce to their valuable client relationships.

Rest assured, each business owns and controls their data in line with strict compliance and data protection requirements around the world. As users are invited by businesses to use the service, you can also trust that participants are who they say they are.
